Request for Tender for Research Services

An evidence review of Hate Crime Legislation
Request for Tender for Research Services

Applications for tenders must be returned to research@justice.ie by COB April 26th 2019

Section 1. Background information and invitation to tender

1.1 The Department of Justice and Equality
The Department of Justice and Equality ("the Department") is a department of the Government of Ireland. The Department's mission is to work to make Ireland a safe, fair and inclusive place to live and work. It has a wide range of responsibilities including, state security, the protection of life and property, the prevention and detection of crime, maintaining and promoting fairness and equality, providing services for the buying and selling of property, managing inward migration to the State, providing a Courts Service, updating our criminal and civil laws, developing the Insolvency Service and various other regulatory services.

1.2 Background to the tender
The Department invites tenders for research concerning hate crime legislation, how other jurisdictions have legislated for it and what lessons have been learnt. Examination of the legislation in this area has become a research priority for the Department.

For the purposes of this study, a ‘hate crime’ is an offence which is known to the criminal law and is committed in a context that includes hostility or prejudice on the basis of protected characteristics e.g. gender, civil status, family status, sexual orientation, religion, age, disability, race, membership of the Traveller Community. It does not include incitement to hatred. The Department is separately undertaking a review of the Prohibition of Incitement to Hatred Act 1989.

There are different approaches to legislating for hate crimes. For example, legislation may provide that a bias motivation must be considered by a judge to be an aggravating factor for sentencing when a person is convicted of an offence under the general criminal law. Alternatively, it may provide for specific offences consisting of the commission of an existing offence, such as assault, with a bias motivation. The range of ‘protected characteristics’ can vary.

In Ireland, hate crimes are prosecuted as generic offences through the wider criminal law. The trial judge can take aggravating factors, including a motivation based on hostility or bias, into account at sentencing. This research aims to inform policy in how Ireland deals with hate crimes.

1.3 Research aims
The rapid evidence assessment is to focus on the following three questions:

1. How have other jurisdictions legislated for hate crime? Specifically:
   - Does the legislation provide for specific offences, aggravated sentencing, a combination of both, or does it take a different approach?
   - What type of victim characteristics are protected by the legislation
   - How have the crimes been measured – and what issues have there been?
   - How do police services record hate crime? Have there been any issues? How have they been dealt with?

2. Provide an assessment of the effectiveness of the legislation (with reference to quantitative data, where available).
   - Has the legislation facilitated the measurement of the incidence of hate crime, reduced the incidence of hate crime or reduced prejudice and intolerance?
   - How effective has the legislation been in achieving its other stated outcomes? What have facilitated this – and where have there been difficulties?
What are the reasons for the effectiveness or otherwise of the legislation? In particular, what is the role of the various criminal justice agencies, such as policing and prosecution services, in contributing to the effectiveness or otherwise of the legislation?

Have any non-legislative measures (for example, systems of recording of hate crime by police) been put in place that have been effective in achieving the outcomes referred to above or other stated outcomes?

3. Provide learning to inform the potential development of such legislation or other relevant policy measures, in Ireland.

- What approaches used in other jurisdictions could be useful here? How transferrable are such approaches to the Irish context?
- Provide a set of recommendations, based on the research evidence, for what a system for monitoring hate crime in Ireland would look like

1.4 Research outputs
The tenderer will be required to undertake a review of the research literature in this area. The review should cover literature published from 1990 to 2019. The articles reviewed should be in English, within peer reviewed journals, and should provide an international focus. If other research sources are to be included, it should be clearly stated in the proposed methodology and a rationale provided, along with a clearly stated approach as to how they will be dealt with.

The research outputs should include:
- An interim report highlighting key findings. This can be presented as a slide pack.
- A final report on the findings to be submitted to the Department of Justice and Equality
- A presentation on the final report to the Department of Justice and Equality

The tenderer will be required to outline the approach that is proposed to be taken in undertaking this work in the attached submission form. In doing so the following key questions must be addressed as part of the overall response:
- The methodology to be used to conduct the evidence review, including the strengths and limitations of the proposed approach
- What the key search terms will be
- What academic databases or other sources will be used to sample from
- The process for deciding which articles to include for the review and which to exclude
- The data recording process (essentially, what are the key data points you will record for each study such as author, year of publication, what type of study, evaluation type and its strength)
- The process that will be used to assess the quality and methodological rigour of the articles
- How the findings within articles will be synthesised

1.5 Timeframe
The Department is eager that the tenderer will be ready to start as soon as possible and asks that tenderers specify how soon they would be in a position to commence the work. Duration of the tender will be no more than six months after the awarding of the tender.

The estimated budget for this study is €30,000 (including VAT).
Section 2. Instructions to Tenderers
