Section 1. Background information and invitation to tender

Understanding reoffending: Push factors and preventative responses

1.1 The Department of Justice

The Department of Justice (“the Department”) is a department of the Government of Ireland. The Department's mission is to work to make Ireland a safe, fair and inclusive place to live and work. It has a wide range of responsibilities including, state security, the protection of life and property, the prevention and detection of crime, providing services for the buying and selling of property, providing a Courts Service, updating our criminal and civil laws, developing the Insolvency Service and various other regulatory services.

1.2 Proposed Rapid Evidence Review

This proposed evidence review has a number of goals. Firstly, the review should develop a synthesis of evidence bringing together all available high quality research related to mapping the push factors linked to reoffending. Evidence of this nature will help to inform policy makers and agencies responsible for the management of those who offend of the reasons underpinning reoffending. In addition, it will also help to improving data collection efforts across agencies with responsibilities in this area thereby improving interagency cooperation regarding the management of those who offend.

A further goal of the review is to explore interagency based programmes which co-ordinate the care of those who offend to promote moving away from re-offending. This in turn will assist agencies in providing more effective and safer rehabilitative custody and improve the supervision of community sanctions.

This approach aims to summarise the knowledge base of an issue in a timely and accessible manner in order to inform practice and policy decisions related to reoffending. Rapid reviews are rigorous and explicit methods that avail of the evidence required for policy recommendations in a short timescale.

The evidence summaries created using this method can be used to:

- Support decision making for policies and programmes.
- Serve as a briefing note to inform stakeholders on an issue.
- Support the development of new policies and programmes

The research questions the review should address and explore include the following;

- What are the primary factors associated with reoffending behaviour and how these intersect with each other. These can include, but are not limited to;
 - socio-economic characteristics,
 - educational achievements/opportunities
 - offending history,
 - history of imprisonment,

- history of anti-social behaviour,
 - history of substance misuse,
 - mental health issues,
 - dual diagnosis of substance misuse and mental issues,
 - experience and level of participation in prison or community based criminal justice or other, for example health interventions,
 - lifestyle instability (unemployment, frequent moves),
 - homelessness
 - family relationships/ties
 - negative peer associations,
 - and any other variables of relevance.
- What factors are associated with desistence from offending?
 - What examples are there of interagency based programmes, including community release based programmes which co-ordinate the care of offenders to promote moving away from re-offending? By interagency we mean more than one agency or government department being involved in the management of those who offend, including non-criminal justice organisations?
 - What have been the strengths and challenges of running such programmes? Additionally,
 - How do programmes function and what are their objectives?
 - Describe programmes in terms of their suitability for different types of people who offend?
 - What is the basis of such programmes (statutory or administrative)?
 - What data/information is gathered and by who?
 - How is data shared? Who manages it? Who shared information? What challenges did this pose and how, if at all, were they addressed?
 - What have been the measures of success for these programmes? Did they establish Key Performance Indicators?

The review should also seek to highlight any gender differences in terms of push factors and responses to reoffending.

In addition to the above questions, tenderers are also encouraged to offer suggestions for further exploration of this topic.

The scope of the review should cover literature published from 1990 to present. The articles reviewed should be in English, within peer reviewed journals, and should focus on European nations. If other additional sources are to be used, then this should be clearly stated in the methodology, a rationale provided, along with a clearly stated approach as to how they will be dealt with.

Completed by September 2021, this Rapid Evidence Review will inform activity in this policy area.

1.3 Research outputs

The tenderer will be required to outline the approach that is proposed to be taken in undertaking this work in the attached submission form.

A report on the findings to be submitted to the Department of Justice

A presentation on the final report to the Department of Justice

Tender Requirements:

The tenderer will be required to outline the proposed approach to this work in the attached submission form. In doing so, the following key questions must be addressed as part of the overall response:

- The methodology to be used to conduct each of the elements of the research

- What the key search terms will be
- What academic databases or other sources will be used to sample from
- The process for deciding which articles to include for the review and which to exclude
- The data recording process (essentially, what are the key data points you will record for each study such as author, year of publication, what type of study, evaluation type and its strength)
- The process that will be used to assess the quality and methodological rigour of the articles
- How the findings within articles will be synthesised

1.4 Timeframe

The Department is eager that the tenderer will be ready to start as soon as possible and asks that tenderers specify how soon they would be in a position to commence the work. The project should be completed within 3 months of the tender having been awarded to the successful applicant.
